Conservancy District Boundary Settled Soon

Definite action will be taken soon to clear up the dispute over the boundaries of the Fox River Conservancy District, of which the Chain of Lakes is a part, when the case of the people of Plano against the district, is heard before the circuit judge at Yorkville, Kendall county, the first of the month.

The six judges who fixed the boundary originally met recently at Geneva and passed a resolution to amend the boundary lines so that they will be satisfactory to all concerned, and it is expected that the difficulty will be cleared up soon by the elimination of the territory in question from the jurisdiction of the board, according to J. C. James, local member of the board.

The dispute arose from the fact that changes in boundary lines occurred at Plano and Aurora before the time that the bill embodying provision for the conservancy district was drawn up and the time that it went into effect.

WEST KENOSHA CO. FAIR DRAWS RECORD CROWD TO WILMOT

Exhibits Pronounced Best
Ever—Governor's Day Brings Throngs.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

The closing of the West Kenosha County Fair on Saturday brought to an end the most successful three day fair insofar as exhibits, attractions and attendance record were concerned that ever has been held in the eight years in which the West Kenosha County Fair Association has been holding annual fairs. The fair directors received much praise for the competent manner in which the fair was conducted this year. High praise was received from the men asked to judge the stock and farm products exhibits. J. F. Wojta of the State Agricultural College at Madison said he had judged no better display of farm products this year and J. M. Fargo from the same school who judged cattle and hogs made the same estimate of the exhibits under him.

Governor Speaks to Thousands.

Friday, the Governor's Day, drew the largest attendance of the three days and three thousand people gathered around the band stand to listen to Governor Fred Zimmerman and Congressman Henry Allen Cooper.

Assemblyman D. J. Vincent with a few well chosen remarks introduced Governor Zimmerman. The Governor's remarks were very fitting and consisted of a eulogy of living and business conditions to be found in the state of Wisconsin. He gave statistics to show the relative standing of Wisconsin compared to sister states and foreign countries as to agriculture, dairying, and industries. He based the phenomenal success in this state along these lines to the wonderful co-operation found in each one and strongly urged further co-operation amongst the farmers. Not alone with the farmers, but with the industrial conditions in the neighboring cities as each is dependent on the other.

He announced the coming of the Farmers' Congress to be held at Madison on Oct. 13 and 14, and urged the attendance of all members of farm organizations, including the women's groups.

At the conclusion of Governor Zimmerman's remarks the crowd insisted on Congressman Henry Allen Cooper addressing them. Congressman Cooper spoke of living conditions in early times contrasted to those of today, of heroic exploits performed in modern days and dwelt at length on Lindbergh's trip across the Atlantic by plane, and closed his remarks with a short sketch of Constitution Day recently observed Sept. 17.

Other distinguished visitors on the platform with the speaker were Senator George Hull, Whitewater; Senator John C. Schumann, Watertown and Assemblyman Conrad Shearer of Kenosha.

N. W. Game.

The football season for the Antioch Township High School will be officially opened Friday when the team will travel to Waukegan for the year's initial game.

Eighteen players will be named the first string list to be subject to change, according to Coach Watson. Much speculation is rife, of course, as to the names to appear on the team roster. The Harrington game which was reported by the News last week as scheduled for Saturday October 8th will be played next Friday afternoon October 7th.

Thieves Rifle Cash Drawer Of North Chicago Lumber Co.

Thieves Sunday night entered the North Chicago Lumber Co. in this city and made away with $25.00 taken from the money drawer. A fountain pen was also taken by the thief, however, this was found near the fence, and was evidently dropped by the thief when he attempted to escape. An investigation showed that the cash drawer had been pried open with a stove poker which was discovered in the office. The window, through which entrance had been gained was jammed. No attempt had been made to open the safe.

It was reported that earlier in the evening a lad was seen prowling around the buildings but no attention was paid to him as it was thought that he was watching the buildings across the street. The young fellow appeared to be about 16 years of age.

Green Bay Road Resort Robbed

$15.00 in cash was taken from the "Block House," a confectionery stand operated by Steve Lewis at Twenty-second street and Green Bay Road, some time Sunday night. Investigation showed that the thieves gained entrance through a rear window. All of the slot machines in the place had been carried out and were broken open. However the money cache in them remained intact, and the loot of the thieves was limited to that obtained from the cash drawer. No Clues were left.

The bullet was from a small caliber revolver. Selim believes the occupants of the other car to have been some drunken youths out looking for excitement.

ONLY THE TURNOVER COUNTS

Long shelves piled high with goods mean little in the prosperity of a merchant—it is on the turnover that profit comes—by the frequency with which the merchandise moves is figured the gain—persistent advertising in the News is a most effective and economical way to accomplish this end.

No student should go elsewhere for schooling until he has exhausted the educational advantages of Antioch. Added to the wholesomeness of the courses offered here is the advantage of living in surroundings which are conducive to study.

The impression which Antioch makes on the visitor comes from those things which first meet his eye. Clean streets, sidewalks and alleys and neat store fronts are unconsciously taken into account.

YOUR children know that if they plant a little tree, it keeps growing until it becomes a big tree.

Teach them that a bank account grows in the same way. Every year the interest adds to it, and year by year it grows larger.

A tree will grow faster, of course, if it is cultivated and fertilized. A bank account will grow faster if it is fertilized regularly with savings.

Until you have tried it, you may have no idea how much the children will be interested in having a bank account, and in watching it grow

Give them that opportunity. Come in and let us tell you how to start a bank account for your children.

The explosion of an engine in a gasoline launch recently caused a fire which nearly ruined the vessel and practically destroyed the boat house of J. G. Saal at Mistake Bay.

A legal battle looms in Racine between the city and county because of the discovery that the county has been charging more than actual expense for lodging patients at the county homes. The county has charged the city $4.80 each week for lodging the city inmates and patients while the actual expense has been about $3.50 a week. County officials have no right to make a profit at county institutions at the expense of the city, city officials maintain.

The First State Bank of Fox River Grove has adopted a plan whereby it is expected that they will make thieves attempting to burglarize the bank come to grief. A new tear bomb mechanism that will render marauders helpless has been installed.

The towns of Bristol and Paris recently won an appeal to the state tax commission of Wisconsin for a reduction in valuation of their property for tax purposes. The reapportionment resulting from the decision will increase the taxes of Kenosha and the town of Pleasant Prairie. It is claimed.

The department of public works of the state of Wisconsin recently let the contract for ten miles of highway from Melleny to Genoa City, at the Wisconsin line. This adds ten more miles to the link of concrete road between Lake Geneva and Chicago.

Elkhorn, Wisconsin, has recently dedicated a new Baptist church finished at a total cost of $25,000.

After authorities at Twin Lakes and the father of the boy had given up the search for Thomas Burgess, 15 year old Oak Park boy, the body was found by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wright of Lake Geneva, who were cruising about Lake Elizabeth in a row boat. Abandonment of the search for the boy was occasioned by the fact that his father stated that he and the boy had been engaged in a controversy as to whether or not the boy should return to school. It was concluded that the boy had set up a hoax to prevent his parents from searching for him and returning him to school.

Three armed bandits entered the cottage of William Smith, aged 70, at Wauconda, early Sunday morning, and ransacked his home. Two companions remained outside in a high-powered automobile on guard duty. The men gained entrance by prying open a window. The aged man suffered greatly from shocks, because of threats made by one of the bandits.

In the Window

Wife Shot With Gun That "Wasn't Loaded"

San Francisco, Calif.—"Well, it's all cleaned now," remarked Robert C. Wilchar, as he walked into the living room of his home twirling a small automatic pistol in his hands.

Almost instantaneously there was a report from the gun and a shrill scream from Mrs. Robert C. Wilchar, thirty, who had been sitting on the floor reading the papers.

A bullet struck Mrs. Wilchar's left foot, entering the large toe and passing successively through three other toes and slightly grazing the little toe. Mrs. Wilchar was taken to the Park Emergency hospital in an ambulance and her injuries were dressed.

Wilchar, a manufacturing jeweler, had been cleaning the pistol in another part of the house. He thought he had removed all of the cartridges from the clips and that the gun was unloaded.

The youth was run down the other day unknown to those in charge of the engine. ## CUTS OFF OWN LEG TO GET INSURANCE

Austrian Gets Compromise Payment of $35,000.

Vlenno.—The Anglo-Danubian Insurance company is to make a compromise payment of $35,000 to Emil Marek, the man who is alleged to have hacked off his leg to obtain insurance money.

This announcement marks the end of one of the most extraordinary cases which have ever come before the courts of any country.

Two days after taking out an accident policy for $400,000, Marek, a young Vlennoese engineer, was found with his leg nearly cut in two, and the lower part of the limb had to be amputated. Marek stated that the accident happened owing to the ax slipping while he was chopping a log, but the insurance company refused payment, alleging that Marek, with the help of his wife or of a friend, had deliberately hacked through the bone of his leg in order to secure the insurance money.

A criminal charge was brought against Marek and his wife, and the severed leg, preserved in spirit, was a frequent exhibit in court.

The proceedings lasted about two years and ended in the acquittal of the couple on the main charge, but Marek was sentenced to four months' hard labor for conspiracy and procuring false evidence, and his wife to three months' imprisonment. In view, however, of the lengthy proceedings both were immediately set free.

Four Persons Known to Have Picked Blue Blood

Only four known persons, including the owner, bet on a horse that paid odds of 182 to 1 at the Homewood track near Chicago the other day, and when the longshot came home a victor, two almost swooned, and another, a negro stable boy, turned hand-springs until he was exhausted.

It was the Kentucky thoroughbred Blue Blood who wrote race horse history for Illinois when she finished two lengths in front in the five furlongs race. The horse's owner, Carter Everett, apparently was the only person in the park who wagered more than $2. He wagered $20 "on the nose," and collected $3,651. He was overcome when the odds were posted.

A glass of water had to be hurried to a woman in the clubhouse who bordered on hysterics when she saw that her $2 ticket across the board had returned her $610.20. A man near the judges' stand who had squandered $2 on a win ticket was overcome with joy when he saw he had gained $303.10. The negro stable boy appeared to be the only other person who had bet $2 on the horse.

Ray Kremer Has Reached Hurling Peak of Career

Ray Kremer has reached the pitching peak at a time when most hurlers are on the down grade. Just turned thirty-one, he led the National league hurlers last year and has gotten off to a flying start this season.

He seemed doomed to end his pitching days in the minors, spending seven of his best playing years with the Oakland team in the Pacific Coast league, until the Pirates corralled him in 1924. Starting his fourth season with Pittsburgh his records show 58 major league triumphs and only 24 defeats for a percentage of about .790.

He has improved with age, topping the league's moundmen last season with 20 victories and 6 defeats—yet a dozen years ago his health wasn't good enough for him to get a trial with the New York Giants. He was called in from the Pacific northwest in 1915 by John McGraw but sent back to the same territory when illness cost him his chance for a tryout.

DOG'S MANNERS CONVINCE COURT

Proves to Judge's Satisfaction It Was Stolen.

New York.—A Pekinese dog had its day when on the witness stand in the Yorkville court, held by its mistress, Mrs. Ethel Welhouse. It proved successfully to Magistrate Flood that it belonged to her. The Pekinese cast accusing glances at Joseph Ferretti, thirty-two years old, charged with having taken the dog from Mrs. Welhouse's apartment, after forcing an entrance, and keeping it till his arrest.

When Mrs. Frances Kneitel, counsel for the defense, argued there was no actual proof of her client's having stolen the dog, it licked its chops, yawned several times and looked disgusted with what apparently seemed to it most utter nonsense.

When Mrs. Welhouse was asked to give proof of her ownership, the dog licked her hand. She said, "He's mine because I know he's mine," and to substantiate this she said her dog was peculiar in that it had three moles under its chin. She held the animal up to exhibit these tags of ownership.

Counsel for the defense held the dog might have been stolen by some one else and sold to Ferretti and therefore the charge of burglary should be dismissed. The magistrate differed and held the prisoner without bail for the grand jury.

Mrs. Welhouse said she chanced to see Ferretti holding her dog while standing outside a candy shop and waited until he put the animal down on the sidewalk. Then she went up close and dropped a handkerchief. The dog went to it and took it in its mouth.

She said she demanded the dog, but Ferretti refused. She then sent for the police.

FARMER ADMITS FOUL SLAYING OF BROTHER

Killed Him Because He Allowed Cattle to Stray on Other's Farm.

Hull, Quebec.—Another Quebec murder mystery has been solved. In the cells of the Hull jail Harold Mulligan, farmer of Hinecks township, five miles north of Kazabazua, signed a confession that he murdered his brother, Thomas Oliver Mulligan, on June 18, last, on a road leading to the latter's farm.

Clever work on the part of Detective Arthur Malo of the Quebec provincial police department landed Harold Mulligan in the Hull jail and his confession was the result of rigid questioning by Malo.

On June 19, according to Mulligan's confession, he hid behind a tree, rifle in hand, and waited for the appearance of his brother, whose farm was nearby. The brother appeared, Mulligan fired once and the victim fell. The murderer then walked calmly back to his own farm, cleaned and oiled his rifle and awaited further developments, according to his statement.

Didn't Have Long to Wait. Developments came rapidly. Malo was placed in charge of the case and with little or nothing to work on, finally fixed the crime on the dead man's brother. A slip on the part of the confessed murderer further convinced Malo his line of reasoning was correct.

Following his arrest, Mulligan was taken back to the scene of the murder and here the crime was re-enacted.

Gives Demonstration. When asked to point out the spot from which he had shot his brother, Mulligan ran to it and, kneeling, he demonstrated how he had fired the shot.

In the confession it was brought out that Mulligan had harbored ill feeling toward his brother. He stated that he had told his brother many times to keep his cattle off his farm, and told his mother that he would shoot the cattle "and Tom, too."

In May last, according to the confession, he had asked one Ferdinand Legors to shoot his brother, but Legors declined.

Boy, Aged Ten, Preaches His Way Into Trouble

Columbus, Ohio.—Delbert Hansen, a ten-year old "evangelist" who chews tobacco and preaches on the streets whenever he can get one to listen to him, was before Juvenile court on a charge of delinquency.

"I've been preaching again," sobbed Delbert. "I just can't help it."

Little Delbert's "evangelism" has been going on for five years. He possesses almost an uncanny knowledge of the Bible and delivers his childish sermons in a manner that holds his small audience.

He convinces his listeners he needs money for his "poverty-stricken family," and after every sermon, delivered on any street corner that happens to strike his fancy, the youthful preacher adroitly passes the hat, never failing to gather a respectable sum for his endeavors.

Apparently brilliant in some ways, precocious in his ability to speak and skilled in the art of touching hearts and pocketbooks, Delbert presents a problem for the courts.

He received a lecture from the Juvenile Judge and a suspended sentence to the Boys' Industrial school, and was released.

Doctors Take Safety Pin From Baby's Throat

Chicago.—Jean Curtis, eight months old, is recovering from an operation to remove an open safety pin swallowed in the child's home at 9011 South Carpenter street. Dr. Leo Sweeney and Dr. Carl Christopher performed the operation. Doctor Christopher said a rubber tube was passed down the baby's throat until the pin was reached. A narrow forceps was then inserted in the tube and the pin closed and withdrawn.

At The Churches

St. Ignace Church Notes (Episcopal)

Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity-Calendar.

9:45—(Church School.

11:00 a. m.—Matins and Sermon.

There will be no celebration of the bell Gwyn, which occurred suddenly Wednesday morning. The prayers of the parish are asked for the repose of his soul in God and for Fr. and Mrs. Gwyn in their hour of great sorrow.

Next Sunday the sermon will have to do with St. Francis, "Everybody's saint." St. Francis of Assisi, who has been called the most Christlike man of history, entered into rest on Oct. 4, 1226. His loving devotion to Christ and His church and his simple philosophy of life makes him one of the most loved by men of 1927.

The debt of the church has become quite a serious problem and it must be met firmly and with faith. We must all do our bit. Expect to have the privilege of being asked as a Christian to aid your church. The condition is really quite serious and must not be trifled with. All things are possible with God, however.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

The service of worship at the Methodist church next Sunday morning will center around the sacrament of the Holy Communion. All peoples, regardless of church affiliation will find a ready welcome at the Communion table. Come and warm your heart by having fellowship with the Holy Spirit at this service of worship. The sermon theme "The Claim of the Human Spirit" will help you to think thru some of your religious perplexities. In the evening the service begins at 7:30 o'clock.

"What the Dickens!"

When you exclaim, "What the dickens!" you are not referring to the author. The proof that Charles Dickens has nothing to do with the expression is that Dickens was born long after Shakespeare died, and Shakespeare causes one of his characters—Mrs. Page, in "The Merry Wives of Windsor"—to say, "I cannot think what the dickens his name is." The term is probably a contraction of "devilkins."

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—From the comfortable financial situation to which he had been born, Peter Milman, American gentleman of the old school, and last of his family, is practically reduced to pauper through the misfortune of a friend, Hazen Brewer, whom he had wisely trusted.

CHAPTER II.—Learning of Brewer's misfortune, which means the destruction of his last hope, Milman engages a French butler, Achille Luty, who speaks no English, and is to replace Sneed, servant of long standing, who had been Milman's confidential man.

CHAPTER III.—After an excellent dinner Milman sends his guests into his Japanese garden, where, after each has related the circumstances which wrecked their careers, he convinces them their misfortune is directly traceable to the machinations of an unscrupulous enemy, a man who had risen to high financial position and political power by underhand methods, chiefly blackmail, Paul Raxon.

CHAPTER IV.—Milman explains to his guests how, through his belief in Raxon as a great scoundrel and the victim of malevolent circumstances, he had subscribed to a press-clipping bureau and kept a detective on Raxon's track, learning much to Raxon's discredit, though nothing by which he could be reached legally.

CHAPTER V.—Following Milman's disclosures, his three guests, after a consultation, practically decide to join him in the fight against Paul Raxon. Milman explains his ideas, admitting he has no real plan to bring about Raxon's downfall, except discredit him.

CHAPTER VI.—Raxon's political ambition is the national senatorship from his state. McKimber is the admitted party nominee, and must be eliminated. At his palatial residence, Great Rock, Raxon plans elaborate entertainments in his political interests. Returning to his humble abode, Neeland Barnes finds his daughter, Anita, who had been living with relatives in England, having no home for the girl, Barnes takes her to Milman's, where she is welcomed as a guest.

"So you caught me," she said. "Well, perhaps it is best you did."

"Why?" Peter Milman demanded.

"Because I want to take him away from here. I came to America to look after him—he had been horribly neglected—and I find him entangled in some network of crime. I made him admit it was something with danger in it. At dinner time all tried to deceive me, and you would have succeeded if I hadn't happened to know something about all. You want him because of his courage, and because he is strong and a good shot and boxes well. He isn't clever and scheming as you are, and I won't have him made use of."

"Nita, Nita," groaned her father, "you've got everything wrong."

"I think I have misjudged your father," Milman said. "I am very glad to find what you did was not at his suggestion. I think there is much for you to explain. You are a guest under my roof, and there are certain laws of courtesy and consideration not less binding on you than me. You have chosen to break them. You have spied upon us. You have not behaved as I should have expected a gentleman of your family to do. Why?"

"I've told you," she cried. "I know you are trying to make my father help you in something desperate, and I don't choose to have him run risks for other men."

"You are absolutely wrong," the miserable Barnes asserted.

"Prove it," she retorted. "You are silent. You dare not tell me the truth. I know you wouldn't, so I climbed out of the window to listen to what you were talking about. I'm not going to make any silly fuss by telling the police. All I want is to take my father away. I'm going to make a success of him."

"He is free to go," said Peter Milman wearily. He looked at Malet and Bradney. "So are you. I suppose I did lure you here under false pretenses. In the beginning it seemed so simple."

Nita looked about her in amazement. She did not understand why it seemed they had forgotten her. Even her father turned from her to Peter Milman.

"I shall go only when you have no further use for me," said Bradney.

"When I have done what I prom-

"What Does It All Mean?" the Girl Whispered.

used I'll go. Not before." This from Malet.

"There were no false pretenses in it," Neeland Barnes cried. "I came willingly, and I'll be d—d if I go."

"What does it all mean?" the girl whispered. There was no doubting the friendship, almost the affection, with which the other men regarded Mr. Milman. There was a sterner air about her father when he faced her than she had ever seen before.

"Nita," he said, "with one exception, all the hurts I've received, all the bad hurts that is, have been from girls who thought they were acting for my good. You've been dangerously near doing that tonight. You've got everything twisted. You have made me appear in a very poor light among men I respect."

There were tears dimming her violet eyes when she looked at him.

"Oh, daddy," she murmured, "I only wanted to help you. When you came to my room I said, 'My father and his friends, right or wrong.' I meant it."

"You did not know what you were promising," Milman declared. "Do you mean that if you found your father engaged in doing something the world thought wrong you would take his part?"

"If I thought he was justified, I would."

"Is it fair to involve her?" Bradney broke in.

"Certainly not," Malet decided.

"Perhaps you are right," Milman sighed. "I only know that you might have been a great figure in the world of art, and Mr. Bradney would famous as a scientist, and I myself with a fortune and a home, but for the malevolence of one man."

"Did that man injure my father?" she demanded.

"But for this man your father would not have been warned off the turf. But for him the clubs that he had to resign from would have welcomed him."

"Wait, wait," she begged. "I want to think." Naturally it was of her father she thought. She had always defended him against her aunt, but she had never been able to dislike the accusations as worthless. She had fought because she loved him; not because she believed in him. And now to learn that, after all, his past was not disgraceful, filled her with hope and courage. She was ashamed of herself that she had ever doubted him. There was no sacrifice he demanded of her she would not fulfill gladly.

"Will you tell me all about it?" she pleaded. "No, daddy, not you. You always wander into the bypaths of narrative. Let Mr. Milman tell me."

Very concisely he laid before her what he had told the other men of Paul Raxon and his way of life. As she listened she saw clearly that it was to the malignity of one man that three lives had been ruined and a fourth brought to a penniless old age. She listened attentively to the futile plans they had elaborated and rejected. Perhaps to her fresher and more alert mind these plans seemed commonplace, and doomed to failure. But she knew it was not to commonplace men she listened.

"Now, Mr. Bradney," she commanded, "tell me your story."

"When he had finished she said: 'Of course it was Mr. Milman who was the unknown giver of that hundred thousand dollars.'"

Peter Milman turned red. But he could not deny it.

"Why didn't you tell me?" Bradney asked, with reproach in his voice.

"I did not want to influence you. I wanted you to decide for yourself."

She listened to Malet's story and her father's.

"I shall be a great help to you," she said cheerfully when she was in possession of what facts they could give her. "A woman's brains are always useful. You see, she so often jumps to the right conclusions when you men are floundering along in doubt."

"We haven't one idea worth discussing," Malet admitted.

"I noticed that," she laughed. "I think I see exactly how it can be done."

"Nita," cried her father. He thought she was making a jest of it.

"I mean it, daddy," she said earnestly. "Fellow-conspirators all, listen."

CHAPTER VII

Paul Raxon knew very well that his sudden success would make enemies for him among the established powers in Wall Street. But he also knew that he was not to be brought low by any combination against him so long as he kept his head and resisted speculation.

For the moment he was content to rest and allow financial writers to wonder what his next move would be. He had purchased a home built for large entertainments and determined to become known as one of America's great hosts. And with this he would erect a reputation for those domestic virtues which count so much when electioneering. Raxon smiled grimly when he reflected this meant he should be on good terms with his wife, Mrs. Raxon, unaware of his ambitions, was amazed at finding him so reasonably human.

She was not unaware of her own limitations. The idea that she must with a bound become a famous hostess was disquieting. The years had not dealt so kindly with her as with Paul.

"I have here," he said one morning, "a list of people with whom I want to establish social relations. At present I don't know a quarter of them except by name."

"Why fill the house with strangers?" she asked.

"Because I want something from every name on this list. We've got to entertain so well that they talk about us. This social racket with me is a means to an end. I'm playing a game and if you play it with me you can be a great Washington hostess."

"I don't know anything about being a great hostess," she grumbled.

"You've got to learn. I'm counting on you and the girls to be an asset to me."

Mrs. Raxon was afraid of him. She knew he would not forgive her if she failed, and yet was conscious that she lacked ability for the part she was to play. He came of a better family than she. He was never at a loss conversationally. It was wise, she thought, to point out her limitations now.

"I don't expect you to catch onto this social end yet. You can hire a well-bred woman to teach you. When you've learnt all she can teach, fire her and get another. It's a good system. I've used it a lot. Don't expect to consult me. I shall be too busy. I've got to remodel this place so it doesn't look so much like a summer hotel. I'm a little doubtful of the furniture. All Bellington knew was to put his faith in upholsterers. I'm going to make a blue-hole golf course, a polo ground and a swimming pool."

"Oh, but Paul," she cried, "I shall have to ask you when I don't know."

"Ask me as little as you can," he snapped. "It will cost you money to run this place like a well-oiled machine, but I'm not limiting you. Hire anyone you want to help you."

She looked again through the list of names. Among them were those of whose doings she had read in the social columns for years. Some were equally prominent in politics and finance. The name McKimber headed the list.

"Make the most you can, without overdoing it," of the McKimbers," he commanded. "I want the world to think McKimber and I are bosom friends. Cultivate his wife, she's fat, tho, so you can take quarters together. Young Robin McKimber is more or less a society type and will be glad to find a polo field here when he comes."

"I wish I understood you better," she said a trifle wistfully. She had not been the only woman to say that. "I'm glad you don't," he said cryptically; "that prevents your giving me away. I'm one of those men whose peculiar joy it is to play a lone hand. If you share secrets, they are only fifty per cent your own."

She was vastly relieved that she had confessed her ineptitudes. She could go the more cheerfully about her tasks now. She wondered why the McKimbers were so important in Paul's eyes. Other names exceeded them far in the social scale as she apprehended it. That he had been chairman of the national committee of her husband's party meant nothing to Mrs. Raxon. Her thoughts turned to Robin, the polo-playing heir to great riches. Well, her own Gertrude was good looking and a great heiress. She felt a spirit of gratitude toward her husband which had long been a stranger to her. Most men hated their wives embarking on deliberate attempts to capture society.

The idea of hiring the well-bred woman came back to her when she felt her butler's sneer. How that man seemed to dislike her. How superior he seemed and how aware of her social deficiencies. Yet she lacked the courage to dismiss him. She opened her mouth as though to frame a sentence which would annihilate him and reduce him to the ranks of one looking for work, when her courage failed. Distinctly there was something to be said for the well-bred woman. Such a one would know how to deal with butlers like this.

"A Miss Brown to see you, madam," said the butler. From his tones it seemed Miss Brown was only less distasteful than his employer. He presented a card on a silver tray. Under Miss Brown's name was pencilled, "I am calling at the suggestion of Mrs. Hamilton Buxton."

Although Mrs. Raxon had not been in her native land for some years, she knew Mrs. Buxton's name very well as a distinguished member of the smart hunting set. Also Mrs. Buxton's name was among those to be cultivated. She would see Miss Agatha Brown.

Miss Brown was young, pretty, and delightfully dressed. This was, no doubt, one of Mrs. Buxton's personal friends.

"Mrs. Buxton," Miss Brown began, "thought that as you had bought this lovely place and were going to entertain a lot, you might need a social secretary. I was going to her, but she has taken Lord Kitemanor's hunting box in Leicestershire for the coming season. I have just come back to the United States, where I belong, after spending some years abroad."

"You speak French, then?" said Mrs. Raxon in the Galle tongue. It was her one accomplishment.

"Yes," said Miss Brown with still greater fluency. I have been mainly in England. My last position was with the countess of Hershman at Hershman abbey. She was one of the Boston Tessendous, as, of course, you know."

"What did you do there?" Mrs. Raxon asked.

"Literally everything," Miss Brown confided. "It is an immense place, fully twice the size of this, and for three years I managed it from cellar to attic. I wrote the menus, engaged the servants, saw they did their work and dismissed them if they did not."

Mrs. Raxon smiled happily.

"You understand," Miss Brown continued, "that I was not a servant or even a housekeeper. I'm a great believer in social distinctions. They make entertaining so much easier, don't they? Most people think I am a guest like themselves. I have often been taken in groups with even royalty."

With an unaffected absence of modesty, Miss Brown, in the course of half an hour, managed to impress Mrs. Raxon most favorably. "You would find very little to do here at first," said the elder woman. "We have no house guests at present, but we are going to entertain a great deal."

"I should find a very great deal to do at once," said Miss Brown emphatically. "To begin with, I should dismiss your butler, who is impertinent and offensive."

Impulsively Mrs. Raxon leaned forward and kissed Miss Brown.

OUTDOOR RECREATION IS NOW OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO ALL

Ike Walton League Opposes Destruction of Nation's Playgrounds.

Outdoor recreation has become a natural resource of America which must be judged on equal terms with power, lumber, metals and similar products in administration of the public domain, according to an article in the October number of Outdoor America, official publication of the Izaak Walton League of America.

The article written by Donald Hough, special writer for the magazine, is a protest against the plan submitted to the government by private interests for use of the Superior National Forest, in northern Minnesota, for a series of giant overflow basins for power dams and water storage.

The project development, it is claimed, would wreck a recreation area of vital importance to the people of the middle west. The Superior Forest is pictured as the last wilderness area east of the Rockies, as a playground of national importance, situated within reach of 25,000,000 people. It is, according to Mr. Hough, the juiciest plum dangling before the eyes of the commercial exploiters today, and a battleground on which national issues for use of the public domain are being fought.

Outdoor recreation, until recently considered a by-product, now outranks every public use of some parts of the country, Mr. Hough claims.

Seventy years ago, he points out in the article, the people had no use for the forests and streams other than as they could be developed commercially. He says: "There was too much outdoors and not enough money, and the outdoors, converted into money, has built up America. Times have changed. Today there is too much money and not enough outdoors, the establishment of outdoor recreation as a major use of the public domain is based on this fact."

The day of private domination of public domain is approaching an end, he declares, and points out that "the remnants of recreational territory within democratic striking distance of civilization are pitifully small, and the people have not the slightest intention of letting those remnants get away from them."

Faces Death in Wilds

Only to Be Recaptured

Rio Janeiro, Brazil.—Eugene Diendonne, only living member of the internationally known prowler band of Parisian apaches, led by the dromedary criminal Jules Bonnot, the "demon chauffeur," recently escaped from the penal colony in French Guiana. This fact became known through his recapture by the Brazilian police in the state of Para, northern Brazil.

Diendonne has arrived here in the custody of the police. The notorious apache will be turned over to the French consul.

Diendonne declared that he was the victim of a mistake on the part of the authorities, and that he never was a member of Bonnot's band. He was unjustly sentenced to life imprisonment, he said, which later was reduced to fifteen years' penal servitude in French Guiana.

He was denied any freedom and determined to escape. He obtained a small fishing boat and going down the Oyapock river reached Vigia, in the state of Para, after seventy-two days' navigation in which his frail craft capsize twice. He landed at Belem, found employment, and was saving his money, he said, to return home, where he has a wife and child.

Diendonne was arrested at Belem, having been denounced by some one who learned his identity.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"REALITY" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, September 25.

The Golden Text was from Lamentations 3:19, "Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever; thy throne from generation to generation."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "O Lord God of hosts, who is a strong Lord like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee? The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance" (Psalms 89:8, 11, 15).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is Individual, Incorporeal. He is divine Principle, Love, the universal cause, the only creator, and there is no other self-existence. He is all-inclusive, and is reflected by all that is real and eternal and by nothing else" (p. 331).

STATE PREPARED TO PUSH WORK ON THE DEEP WATERWAY

Will Open World's Markets to Products of Illinois Before 1930.

Construction of the deep waterway from the sanitary canal at Lockport to the Illinois river at Utica, giving the Great Lakes adequate water transportation connections with the Gulf of Mexico, via the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, will be completed before 1930.

This is the prediction of Governor Len Small, with the reaching of an agreement by the state with the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, whereby possession is secured of necessary right-of-way south of Joliet and near the junction of the Desplines and Kankakee rivers.

Much Construction Completed

Already a large amount of construction work on this project has been completed. Near Mazonville is finished and ready for operation one of the great locks which will be a part of this system. A second lock, connecting with the Sanitary District of Chicago, is rapidly nearing completion. Adjoining Starved Rock important work has been under way for a considerable period. It is now possible to push work looking toward the construction of another of the series of locks at Dresden Heights, on the site recently secured from the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

Construction of a deep waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the Illinois river, dredging the latter to permit the passage of large freight boats, was recommended by the first governor of Illinois and has been endorsed by practically every chief executive of the state in the 109 years of statehood. All of the real progress which has been made in the carrying forward of this project has been under the administrations of Gov. Small.

Preliminary Work Complete

Much of the preliminary work has been completed by the Division of Waterways. Exhaustive tests have been made. It is agreed an immense tonnage of freight awaits the completion of the project. This, experts of the Division of Waterways say, will be moved much below present freight rates as charged by the steam roads of the state.

At the same time it will make possible the loading of vessels and barges at points on the Great Lakes or along the waterway for shipment to all parts of the world, and for the greater part without transfer. It will reduce costs of transportation many millions annually, all of which savings will come to the section served by the waterway, making Illinois a still greater manufacturing center and opening to the farming sections of the state the world's markets at less cost.

GIUSEPPE'S TRIP ENDS FAR SHORT OF SUNNY ITALY

Noted Dishwasher and Traveler Sails Almost to Great Fame.

New York.—Giuseppe Caruso, noted dishwasher and traveler of Albany, failed on his first attempt to sail from Albany to Italy on a Hudson river steambus.

Mr. Caruso began the trip, which would have been epoch making if it hadn't ended at Forty-second street, without any advance publicity, and his daring and optimistic venture became known only when failure stared him in the face.

A watchman at the pier at Forty-second street and North river, where the Hudson river boats dock, turned the protesting Mr. Caruso over to a policeman from the West Thirtieth street station. Mr. Caruso protested against leaving the pier.

"I wait for the boat for Naples," he explained. "I buy my ticket and my passport."

Interpreter Called.

He produced a document written in flowing Italian script and explained this was the "passport." But then when he was assured the Naples boat did not sail from that pier he broke into a rash of Italian, so the policeman took him to the station house and sent for an interpreter.

Through the interpreter Mr. Caruso explained he had been in this country eight years and had spent most of his time in Albany washing innumerable dishes. But always as he washed he remembered his beloved Italy. His heart yearned for Naples, and he saved his salary assiduously against the day of his return.

"I save much money," he explained in Italian, pulling out of his pocket a greasy roll of bills, which when counted proved to be more than $2,000.

When he confided in his Albany friends his intention of returning to Italy they proved very helpful. They sold him his passport and a round-trip ticket from Albany to Naples, charging him $30 for the passport and $50 for the ticket.

Then they took him down to the boat, presented a regulation ticket for him and stood on the pier weeping as he steamed down the Hudson.

Didn't Reach Naples.

The boat didn't quite reach Naples. It stopped at the Forty-second street pier and Mr. Caruso was put off. He asked a man when the Naples boat would be along and this chance acquaintance collected $5 in return for a promise to find out. He and the $5 disappeared and the Naples boat never did appear.

After a lengthy conference with police Mr. Caruso was escorted to Grand Central station and put on an Albany train. His friends are not expected to meet him at the station.

Make Neighbors Leave

Me Alone, Wails Man

Milwaukee.—Gustave Kabitzke likes privacy and so, to be separated from his neighbors, Kabitzke built a fence on the boundary line of his property. But several of Kabitzke's neighbors took offense at the partition.

On the same day Kabitzke built the fence, A. E. Stiglbauer and his wife tore it down. Kabitzke reprimanded them, but to no avail, he says. The next day Kabitzke started work on a garage. But hardly were the walls completed when another neighbor, E. Holsbas and his wife, in alleged conspiracy with the Stiglbauers, knocked down the bricks, Kabitzke complains.

All this has been most annoying to Kabitzke and he asked an injunction in Circuit court to deter the Stiglbauers and Holsbas from continuing their alleged house-wrecking activities.

Scolding Penalized

Moscow.—Russian telephone operators are protected by law against being scolded. If a telephone user loses his temper and says what he feels into the transmitter, the offended operator merely reports his number and his telephone is promptly disconnected for a time. The Soviet "hello girls" give few wrong numbers, however.

Sizes of Planets

The naval observatory says that the smallest of the major planets is Mercury; diameter about 3,000 miles. Of the minor planets or asteroids, some are so small that it is impossible to measure their diameters. It is estimated that the smallest are less than 10 miles in diameter.

Yes, How?

Little Martha Jayne, five years old, was visiting her grandmother, who lived near enough to the railroad that the train could be seen easily. She had been watching intently the switching of the train and then turned to her grandmother and asked, "How do they start the train—do they have to crank it?"
